His highly textured paintings are executed in the impasto style, which consists of applying thick layers of oil and acrylic paint, using only a palette knife. Added structure is conveyed through craquelure and occasional scratch marks from the spatula. In the tradition of tachiste artists, namely Nicolas de Stael, shapes are reduced to blocks of colors alluding to rudimentary landscapes and architectural views.

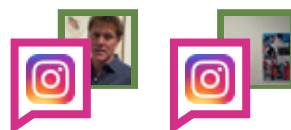

"Fluctuating between the representational and the abstract, I paint landscapes by reducing complex forms to square and rectangular shapes of varying dimensions. Working exclusively with a palette knife, I apply heavy

About
Autumnal Equinox: Moments in Repose

October 1 - October 21, 2021

Opening Reception: October 7, 2021 6-8 PM

Agora Gallery is pleased to announce Autumnal Equinox: Moments in Repose, a group exhibition taking place between October 1 and 21. The show casts a reflective gaze on the incoming fall season, displaying paintings, drawings, and sculptures in a wide breadth of formats and styles. Shying away from the flashy exuberance of the summer months, eleven artists turn inward and seek the quiet comfort of the familiar. The tones become earthy, soft, appealing; the atmosphere is dreamy, almost melancholy. Through various modes of expression, these artists reconcile their need for an intimate communion with the self. Brittany Clifford, Kim Hinkson, and Angela Schiappa engage in unbridled abstract compositions dripping with pathos. Vega Aramburu and John Britton offer graceful reinterpretations of classical painting traditions; reprising the themes of ukiyo-e and Islamic decoration. William Atkinson and Craig Freeman's dynamic paintings are musings on the urban landscapes of Los Angeles and New York City, while Nora Pineda's ceramics explore her passionate, deep-rooted relationship with her native Mexico. A poetic nostalgia is evoked by Ludwig Mannhalter's oil paintings and Alejandro Miras' watercolors of the streets of Barcelona. Lastly, Ai Wen Wu Kretz' acrylic panels "Five Sonnets" provide the soundtrack for this autumnal mise-en-scène, with their elegant choreography of forms. Overall, there is a slowing down of tempo, as if to reclaim one's own private space. A stronger sense of identity arises, whether sought in the artists' immediate surroundings, foreign lands, or imaginary worlds.

Brittany Clifford, Kim Hinkson, and Angela Schiappa engage in unbridled abstract compositions dripping with pathos. Vega Aramburu and John Britton offer graceful reinterpretations of classical painting traditions, reprising the themes of ukiyo-e and Islamic decoration. William Atkinson and Craig Freeman's dynamic paintings are musings on the urban landscapes of Los Angeles and New York City, while Nora Pineda's ceramics explore her passionate, deep-rooted relationship with her native Mexico. A poetic nostalgia is evoked by Ludwig Mannhalter's oil paintings and Alejandro Miras' watercolors of the streets of Barcelona. Lastly, Ai Wen Wu Kratz' acrylic panels "Five Sonnets" provide the soundtrack for this autumnal mise-en-scène, with their elegant choreography of forms. Overall, there is a slowing down of tempo, as if to reclaim one's own private space. A stronger sense of identity arises, whether sought in the artists' immediate surroundings, foreign lands, or imaginary worlds.
